Ben Jones created a dramatic 5-foot high by 16-foot wide mural that was installed at the Martin Luther King Drive Station in Jersey City. The mural was reproduced from a painting in his collection and a company in Ontario, Canada fabricated his work into porcelain enamel. The key components of his piece are humanistic concerns and a preoccupation with themes of self-empowerment and spiritual rejuvenation. The full experience comes in the viewing: two men and women with their arms raised symbolize
